PROJECTS

How healthy is my home? A report of social determinants of health in Fairview & Mount Pleasant neighborhoods, Vancouver, BC

Quest University Canada
Social Determinants of Health
May 2016

I worked with 4 students in my Social Determinants of Health course to develop health indicators, collect data, and produce a 20-page document communicating potential health determinants and their justifications, a health framework, methods, context, analysis framework, results, and recommendations for improvement. We completed the project over the course of 4 days and presented our findings to our class.

Bee Connected Squamish

Quest University Canada
Social Determinants of Health
May 2016

I worked with 4 students in my class to develop an implementation plan for a community beekeeping initiative in Squamish, BC. We researched similar projects, scouted locations, made community connections with stakeholders, provided evidence-based justification, created fundraising plans, and developed a 3-part implementation guide for project leaders. We also wrote a framework for evaluating the success of the project. Our work is intended to supplement a report written during a course titled "The Hive and the Honeybee" which acts as an environmental and biological how-to guide for community beekeeping in the Sea-To-Sky corridor. Our professor, Negar Elmieh, is currently working with the Squamish Helping Hands Society to implement the project using the work produced in both classes.

Bare Magazine

Quest University Canada
Journalism
November 2014

I worked with a class of 18 students to produce a daily newspaper and a magazine. The class required us to write 2 or 3 pieces at the same time, to meet deadlines, and to rely on others to meet deadlines. I served as creative director for both projects.
